

Regence is a family of nonprofit health plans that are driven by the needs of the families and employers served, rather than shareholders. We work every day to ensure our members have access to affordable, high-quality health care.

Since Regence was founded more than 100 years ago, we've remained committed to helping our members live their healthiest lives. We're the largest health plan in the Northwest/Intermountain region, serving more than 3.6 million people in Idaho, Oregon, Utah and Washington.

Because we are nonprofit, we can allocate more resources toward improving member care while holding the line on behalf of our members against the rising costs sought by providers and prescription drug companies.

Through our charitable foundation and our employees, we invested $6.2 million in 2024 to nonprofit groups in our four-state footprint that are building resilient children and families, nurturing a stronger health care workforce, and supporting healthy and connected aging for older adults.

Our deep local ties have lasted more than a century, and we'll continue our commitment to the health of the communities we serve for many years to come.
